Rachel Cash is a partner in the firm's Financial Services Litigation Practice Group. Her practice focuses primarily on defending banks and mortgage companies against alleged violations of consumer protection laws in state and federal courts across the country.

Rachel routinely represents financial institutions such as banks, mortgage lenders, credit card companies, and auto finance companies in consumer lawsuits filed under various state and federal laws, including the Telephone Consumer Protection Act, the Truth-in-Lending Act, the Fair Credit Reporting Act, the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, and the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act. Rachel has also defended retail banks involving an array of allegations including account management and payment posting issues as well as mortgage lenders against allegations of wrongful foreclosure in a number of states, including both judicial and non-judicial foreclosure jurisdictions. Her experience includes defending both individual and class actions at the trial and appellate level. In addition to her financial services practice, Rachel is a member of the firm's cybersecurity group and has worked with financial institutions to navigate the preparation and submission of numerous data breach class action settlement claims.

Rachel received her J.D., summa cum laude, from the University of Alabama School of Law, where she served as Senior Editor of the Alabama Law Review and was selected as a member of Order of the Coif. In addition, Rachel was a Hugo L. Black Scholar, a member of the Bench & Bar Legal Honor Society, and received the M. Leigh Harrison Academic Achievement Award. Rachel received her B.S., summa cum laude, in Real Estate and Finance from Florida State University. She is a member of both the Alabama Bar and the Florida Bar.

In addition to her law practice, Rachel serves on the Young Professionals Board for the Greater Birmingham Humane Society and on the Board of Directors for the Shelby Humane Society. She
